School of Veterinary Medicine
Clinical training programs 2022

The School of Veterinary Medicine, Murdoch University has the following vacancies for 2022:

Residency training program

- Equine surgery

The three year, full-time program allows a successful candidate to fulfil the credential requirements for speciality certification. The residencies are supervised by board certified academic staff through compulsory, concurrent enrolment in three years, full-time postgraduate study at Murdoch University. Sequential completion of a Masters of Veterinary Clinical Studies (M1223) followed by a Research Masters in Training degree (M1262) is required for completion of the residency training program. An annual stipend of $40k+ is offered with concurrent enrolment in M1223 + M1262. Applicants must be able to start the program in early to mid July for Semester 2 enrolment.

12 month Specialty training (2 positions)

- Large Animal (Equine/Theriogenology/Production combined program)

The Specialty Training Program is a year-long training program in the School of Veterinary Medicine at Murdoch University in Western Australia. The training program offers experience in a specialty discipline with an opportunity to also gain research experience through concurrent enrolment in an accelerated Research Masters with Training (M1315). This position would suit a veterinary graduate with some experience, interested in university training or pursuing a residency. Exceptional new graduates will be considered. An annual stipend of $40k is offered with concurrent enrolment in M1315. Applicants must be able to start the program for Trimester 1 in early to mid July.

Application for residency and trainee positions is restricted to veterinarians with a degree that can be registered in Western Australia. Australian and New Zealand citizenship or Australian permanent residency status is required for eligibility for full tuition-fee support. Successful applicants who do not meet citizenship or residency criteria are responsible for International Student Tuition Fees.

All enquiries can be forwarded to Dr Giselle Hosgood by email g.hosgood@murdoch.edu.au

Applications close 11:59pm, June 30, 2022. (Early applications/EOI's are encouraged)

A letter of intent, current CV, certified copy of academic transcripts, names of 3 referees, and a certified copy of passport/visa as proof of Australian Citizenship or Permanent Residency, or of New Zealand citizenship, should be submitted to g.hosgood@murdoch.edu.au. Candidates are chosen after a competitive selection process.
